can download from Garmin website. The file I've used is not that big and had been dated in 04-2005. A: I'm afraid I'm going to be contradicting here, but from personal experience I've yet to find any generic map service that is truly compatible with Apple products. They don't share the same exact data and the same data format, and to my experience most do not even work on devices that are not Apple branded. To my experience the best maps are those that are bought on Apple's store and are specifically designed for Apple products. That being said there are many maps that are only compatible with specific devices, for example, Apple maps or the included Apple Maps are only available on iOS devices. I have no doubt that there are some other generic maps that have the same amount of data that could be of use, but the only one I'm aware of is the maps included with Google Earth Pro. They are not compatible with other devices, but can be very useful. Gunmen shot dead a second soldier and wounded four others when they opened fire on a caravan of 2d92ce491b
