Geography helps us to understand. The center of ancient Israel was surrounded by fertile areas – where people and agriculture were based. The land of Israel (Judea and Samaria) were closer to Jerusalem. Jerusalem had walls and was surrounded by areas where people lived. When the Assyrian empire conquered northern Israel and killed a lot of people in the region, the people moved to the east and west where there was more agricultural land. In Assyria there were people who were wealthier and had more food than in the region of Israel. There were better locations where people lived and moved to. The same thing happened in ancient Palestine when the Assyrian empire was in control. People migrated and settled in different locations. This is the same thing happening now. A lot of Jews immigrated to countries like the United States, England, Germany and Israel. They could immigrate to a country with their own people and learn their language, and could assimilate into their culture and live a normal life. Some people immigrated to cities like Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv, Haifa, etc. After the Jewish people were driven out of Jerusalem in the year 70 A.D., they were forced to live in the desert for 40 years. When they entered Jerusalem again in the year 108 A.D., they still had to stay in the desert for 40 years
