Tripura Brahmanacharya Maha Kali. In the Brihad-Bhagavatamrita and Brahmavayvarta Purana, Kali is mentioned as one of the three great teachers worshipped in the Brahma-samhita. He is one of the sons of Brahma and is referred to as Maha Kali (great Kali) in connection with his activities in the material world. In the Nirukta, Kali is referred to as Narasimha, that is, the father of Narasimha. But this name, Narasimha, does not mean the same thing as the name Kali, so he is sometimes called Vararaha Narasimha. Varaha Narasimha is the son of Varaha. Likewise, Kali is the son of Varaha. If you remember, Varaha's son is Narasimha's father, that is, Narasimha is Varaha's son. If you remember, Narasimha, that is, Varaha, is the son of Varaha, that is, the son of Brahma, that is, the incarnation of Shiva. In this case, it is not the same person. They are two men who are sons of Brahma. These two had different wives, and therefore, they produced different children. When it comes to a person, we say, "This is my son." When we talk about Brahma, we say, "This is Brahma." But when we talk about Brahma-vibhuti, it means it is not a human being, but Brahma-vibhuti, and these two - Brahma and his son Prajapati - gave birth to Viraj. This is the Viraj. But it is not Vishakha, as you say. It is not Brahma's two sons. And it is not Brahma's two wives. Brahma is the Brahma Upanishad who gave birth to Viraj. fffad4f19a
