Autoimmune pancreatitis (AIP) is a rare cause of pancreatitis that is often difficult to diagnose. It is distinguished from pancreatitis due to other etiologies by the presence of a dense lymphoplasmacytic infiltrate in the peripancreatic tissues with or without granulocytic infiltration of the pancreas. AIP represents a spectrum of disease, ranging from acute pancreatitis to chronic pancreatitis. There are no guidelines for the diagnosis or management of AIP. This article describes diagnostic and management strategies for AIP based on the experiences of expert members of the Pancreatic Diseases Branch and Sections of the American College of Gastroenterology.b C o l l e c t t h e t e r m s i n 1 3 5 3 * f + 2 1 7 6 * f + 2 4 0 4 * f + 1 7 4 3 * f . 8 3 6 2 * f C o l l e c t t h e t e r m s i n 1 1
