Vehicular Environments) is an amendment to the 802.11 IEEE wireless local area network (WLAN) standards. It is meant to allow for short range communication between vehicle-to-vehicle, vehicle-to-infrastructure and vehicle-to-pedestrian systems.

IEEE 802.11s standard was published on August 2007 as a joint IEEE and ETSI standard. The IEEE 802.11s amendment to the 802.11a, 802.11b and 802.11g standards aims to improve connectivity in vehicle-to-vehicle, vehicle-to-infrastructure, and vehicle-to-pedestrian systems. The IEEE 802.11s amendment has a three-fold objective: The amendment was published in IEEE 802.11-2007. It became effective in September 2007. The amendment was ratified as ETSI TS 102 707

(2007-07). ETSI started standardisation in 2007. It was officially published in November 2007. The amendment is based on IEEE 802.11p (Sub-group 6) from 1998, by replacing Wireless Access in Vehicular Environments (WAVE) with IEEE 802.11s. It adds new LSA and DS parameters to the existing 802.11 infrastructure mode (STA/IBSS) frame exchange. The amendment also specifies new air interface PHY and MAC parameters.
