Oxygen deficit retinopathy (ODR) is one of the many retinal disorders caused by cyclical hypoxia of the retina. ODR is defined as acute or subacute dysfunction of the retina due to cyclical hypoxia of the retina. This condition is caused by reduced oxygen supply to the retina resulting from prolonged eyelid closure. The disorder was first described in 1975 by Neale et al. (5). Because of the long-term damage to the retina, ODR is an important cause of permanent blindness in childhood and adolescence. ODR is a clinical diagnosis and can be made only after the exclusion of all other causes of optic nerve dysfunction.
