She is best known for her song "Burn", which is her highest-selling single. It peaked at number-one in seven countries, including Britain, Ireland, Denmark, Belgium, Germany, Sweden and Australia. Her debut album, Lights was released in the UK on 11 October 2009. In the US, it was released on 20 April 2010, and debuted at number four on the Billboard 200. The album features the hit singles "Burn", "Stereo Love", "Stuck with You", and "Beating Heart". In 2009, she was nominated for four awards at the BRIT Awards. She won the awards for British Breakthrough Act, and British Solo Artist, but she lost out on the awards for Best International Breakthrough and Best International Album. In early 2010, the lead single "Burn" became Goulding's first single to enter the UK Singles Chart top ten. It eventually went on to become her most successful single to date. It was also her first single to reach number one on the U.S. Billboard Hot 100, where it stayed for nine weeks. On 8 February 2010, the singer released a second single "Lights", following its appearance on the debut single of another artist, "Happy". The single "Stereo Love" became Goulding's second consecutive top ten hit in the UK. I will make my way. Yes I will make my way. I will find my way and you will help me make my way. I will make my way. It is what I must do. It is what I must do. I have to make my way. My way. My way. I'll make my way. I'll make my way. Make my way. I have to make my way. Obligado was written and produced by Gustavo Cerati, and was recorded in the songsmith's New York City home studio. The song is a Latin pop track about dependence and new beginnings, and according to Cerati, a companion to his own album My Buenos Aires. It was released by the Argentine label Warner Music on 8 September 2005 in Latin America, Europe and Australia, and on 16 September in the United States. In a 2008 interview with MTV, Cerati commented, "The song is about love,
