All of the above practices sound fine on the surface, but they actually make people less happy. Indeed, according to a recent survey by the New Economics Foundation, the most important thing that people want from their jobs is to feel "respected and engaged." There is an important lesson here: respect yourself and respect the people you work with. And that lesson is even more important when we consider that the truth is that our world is changing. Tomorrow's workplace will look very different from today's, as the nature of work itself shifts and evolves at an unprecedented pace. Learn how you can succeed in the new, uncertain, and highly competitive global economy by attending the 2017 Talent Mapping Conference. For more information and how to join the 2017 Talent Mapping Conference go to www.nga.org/events/talent-mapping-conference/view/united-states. It is important to learn that we are seen to be the way that we are the way that we are. For example, I go into the office with a certain attitude that I am trustworthy. People respond to that. Unfortunately people make decisions based on perception alone. We believe what we see and hear. When we think of talent maps, we think of someone sitting at their desk determining which person is going to be more productive. I am sure that this task is assigned to people who feel that certain people have more talent than others. I have been in organizations who want to set up these talent or mapping groups and one of the first things they discover is that nobody can decide who will be productive. I have heard from one organization that in just one group, 15 people were considered to be the most productive. The attitude of an organization is perceived by the person who is in the organization. How do you control this perception. If everyone is getting along and feeling comfortable, they will actually behave in ways that make them look trustworthy. They will be more productive and the organization will be successful. Therefore the system needs to be in place to get those attitudes aligned. Do you know the definition of leadership? It is really about the people in the organization behaving in ways that are trustworthy. For example, I often tell people that respect is the feeling that others have about you. When you trust others you are engaging in respect. People will work better when they feel that they are working with their peers and that they are in an organization that they know will be fair and that they will be regarded as worthy.

1. Copy the brush from a source image you want to use. 2. Create a new layer in a new image window. 3. Select the layer and press and hold the Ctrl (Windows) or Command

(Mac) key and click the Brush tool to activate the brush. 4. While holding the Ctrl or Command key, drag the mouse to paint the brush in the new layer window. 5. Select the layer again and press and hold the Ctrl (Windows) or Command (Mac) key, and click on the new layer to paste it onto the new layer. If you want to remove all traces of an image (e.g., an unwanted image or animation frame) from your image, use the Eraser tool. This tool is very versatile and is ideal for erasing sections of your image without disturbing the rest of the image. You can select the Eraser tool by selecting the Brush tool and clicking on the Eraser tool icon on the toolbar. You can select it again, by selecting the Eraser tool icon on the toolbar and a round brush will appear in the Brush tool box, as shown in the next figure. You can also select the Eraser tool and hold the Shift key while clicking the square-shaped tool. Click on an area of the image you want to erase and then click again on another area outside the area you want to erase. You can do this until the entire image is clear. To fix any problems with the image you have made, use the Healing tool. If you have made an error when retouching your image, the Healing tool is the only tool that can save your image. Select the tool and hold the Ctrl or Command key and drag it across the image. The two vertical and horizontal crosshairs will appear around the point in the image where you are clicking. Hold the mouse button down over an area to use that area as a reference for the tool. Select the tool again after you have corrected the area. When you have finished a retouch, remember to save your project. If you retouch only a small part of an image, save that retouched part in a new file. If you retouch the entire image, save the finished project in another location. You can then use this project again later. The "tablet" feature
