But what exactly are Photoshop's tools? This guide will examine Photoshop's essential capabilities including layers, editing tools, and file formats. Photoshop Layers The layers feature is the backbone of the Photoshop editing tool. Layers allow images to be composed and edited layer by layer. A group of image layers can be stacked over each other to produce complex multi-faceted designs. Many advanced Photoshop users employ multiple layer techniques such as adding textures and backgrounds, and then blending or masking parts of the images. Composing complex designs or technical images with layer techniques can be a daunting task for the untrained or even veteran image editor. Photoshop Layers Browser The image on the left is composed of multiple layers; this type of design is often more photorealistic. The image on the right is composed of only a single layer. This type of design is normally just used for simple pictures or for those with a limited budget for photo editing. What's a Photoshop Layer? A Photoshop layer is a group of pixels that are stacked on top of each other. Layers can be grouped into file folders, making it possible to have several layers in a single image. Layers can be moved, adjusted, resized, and added to complex multi-faceted designs, which are often referred to as layers. There are a variety of ways to work with layers, including splitting, merging, duplicating, and deleting them. What is the Difference between a Layer and a Photoshop File? Image files are composed of pixels, and Photoshop is built using pixel-based image editing tools. However, when you create a Photoshop file, you can add other types of data such as text, graphics, or vector. Adobe Compatible Files vs. Portable Photoshop Files Some file formats are only designed for Photoshop. For example, Portable Photoshop files allow users to quickly share and edit images in the format of their choosing. Portable Photoshop files can be opened in other graphics editing programs and applied to photos. These file formats include JPEG, GIF, and TIFF. You can also use Photoshop to open and work with other file formats such as PDF, TGA, EPS, and JPG. Mahoning County officials have arrested two more suspects in last year's ransomware attack that has affected thousands of computers across the region, county records show. This is not the first time the Mahoning County Sheriff's Office and state police have arrested others in the case, which began with local police investigating a possible ransomware attack on Feb. 18, 2018, officials said. In early February, detectives looking into the attack connected the arrest to the case of a 24-year-old man named Steven Southers, who was arrested by the Youngstown Police Department and Mahoning County Sheriff's deputies. Southers of Warren has been charged with one count of unauthorized use of property valued at $500 or more, less than $100,000. Southers was arraigned at Mahoning County Common Pleas Court, and a judge set bail at $10,000. Also in February, Mahoning County prosecutors charged Kenny Czarnecki, 24, and his girlfriend, Lindsey Radford, 23, of Youngstown, with two counts each of conspiracy and unauthorized use of property. Czarnecki was charged with one count of conspiracy and one count of unauthorized use of property with a value between $500 and $50,000. Radford was charged with one count of unauthorized use of property with a value of $500 or more. Czarnecki and Radford each posted $10,000 secured bond, and a court commissioner set their cash-only bond at $25,000. Czarnecki was charged Jan. 13 in Youngstown Municipal Court. Prosecutors charged Radford Jan. 14 in the county court, and she posted a $1,000 cash bond, according to online court records. Southers and Czarnecki and Radford have all been arrested for their alleged involvement in the ransomware attack. All four suspects were scheduled for a bench trial Wednesday. They are not in custody at this time. In February, the county announced that the attack on its networks had been eliminated and no residents or employees had been affected, though Mahoning County and other government agencies were affected. The ransomware cyberattack on Mahoning County's networks resulted in a temporary shut down of internal computer systems on Feb. 18 and 19, 2018. All systems were back online on Feb. 21.
