How to Make Asian Short Ribs Tray Braising is a technique that I learned on my first trip to a Korean-Japanese restaurant in New Jersey called Busan (which was such a great place – seriously, check it out). Instead of slaving over a huge wok on the stove, the chef dons his chef's hat, walks to the back of the house and trays the meat. Honestly, if you live in an area with a Korean-Japanese restaurant (I lived in SoHo, where there are about 7-8), it's a no-brainer. They make the most amazing meat and, best of all, it's so easy. I've been traying short ribs almost every week since then. This recipe takes a bit longer than a normal stir-fry or braising but, trust me, it's well worth the patience. You can use any short rib you like, however I used pastured Asian Wagyu. Serves 4-6

Ingredients: 2lb. short ribs 1 large onion, cut into wedges 4 large garlic cloves, smashed 6cm knob ginger, peeled 4 stalks rosemary 4 stalks thyme 1 bunch sage 4 garlic cloves, sliced 6-8 peppercorns About 1/2 cup honey (depending on your liking) 1/4 cup light soy sauce (I like to use lighter in taste soy – my personal preference) 1 cup rice wine 1/2 cup sesame oil (I like to use a really good quality extra virgin olive oil – like this one from the Omega brand) 6-8 cups of water Directions: Pre-heat your oven to 300 degrees F. In a large bowl, toss short rib pieces with the 1/2 cup of honey. If you're using a plastic bag, wrap the short ribs in waxed paper to make it easier to transfer to the marinade. Turn the ribs so that the meat is evenly
