It can be used in different ways: as an alarm clock, reminding you in the morning about important events (birthdays, anniversaries, and so on) as an 'interrupt' alarm clock, waking you up from a nap or some other "hard" sleep in the middle of the night when you have little chance of waking up the next day as a stopwatch, time your runs, workouts, and other general computer activities as an instant time/date clock, use the computer to time your runs, workouts and other computer activities as a general information/memory aide, use the computer to store general information about places, people, and events in your life so you can remember it easily. is known for introducing the Egyptian Dynasties into the history of the world, for his extensive use of mummification, and for being the father of Nefertiti. The name Jaunty Jackal may have been derived from jau. Fun Facts Jaunty Jackal became known as Jau when he signed his name on the walls of the country's first mortuary temple at Saqqara with an upward stroke of the serekh. This is reflected in the Fifth Dynasty inscription (1300 BC) that describes Jaunty Jackal's achievements as Jaunty Jackal 'responsible for the great deeds of Osiris who is the great high priest'. Jaunty Jackal was first recorded in inscriptions of Ramesses I of the New Kingdom (c. 1290–1210 BC) and was the forerunner of the authority the pharaohs would wield in Upper Egypt.
