Hi, thanks for watching and helping us. Please consider adding the option to upload subtitles. It's actually an old issue. I posted about it a couple of months ago. I'm glad it's working for you! SubFind is an online subtitle searching tool, enabling users to look for a given subtitle on multiple websites at the same time. With a clean and easy to use interface, SubFind supports a total of six subtitle pages and, unfortunately, there's no way to add new ones. And the truth is, that's really a problem, especially because during our test some of them didn't work at all. SubFind allows you to search for a subtitle in a wide array of languages, including Dutch, Chinese, Czech, Hungarian or Greek. And the searching process is fully customizable straight from the main window with dedicated fields for CD number, FPS, translator and an uploader. In addition, you can define straight from the get go the language of the subtitle and decide whether to search just a single website or all six of them. Clicking on a found subtitle opens the browser and loads the page where the subtitle is published, so no, you cannot download subtitles straight from SubFind. There's a settings menu as well that enables you to configure the search languages, but also the waiting time for page opening, background, text and series subtitle color. If we were to vote for some changes, we would go for a 77a5ca646e
