It was assumed that methylation of H3K4 and H3K27 could play a role in the formation and development of tumors of breast tissue.Q: How to access the array value of a ViewBag object in a controller action in asp.net mvc? I am using Viewbag, for example: ViewBag.user = new List() { "user1", "user2" }; And i want to access the values of the array in a Controller action like this: if (ViewBag.user == null) return; but I got error with that line! A: you can always access the list with @Html.Raw(ViewBag.user) like this: if (@Html.Raw(ViewBag.user)) { // access the values you want } A: Simply use @Html.Raw() which will output your array to the view page. You could also use @Html.Raw(string.Join(", ", ViewBag.user)) for an alternative approach if it is too much for the view to output. But if you really want to do it in the controller, have a look at this question.
