Q: jQuery in Tabpanel not working in IE7/IE8 only I have a very strange and frustrating problem. I am working on a web application which is almost done. The only thing I am having trouble with is if you open 2+ tabs on a tabpanel tab some of them will work. If you open 3 or more tabs only the first 2 tabs in the tabpanel will work. I have a test page which opens 3 tabs in the tabpanel and IE8 throws "Error: Object doesn't support this property or method". Here is the weird part I tried doing a test on my test website. If I add in a jQuery code to the line which calls the tabpanel the page works fine in IE7/IE8 in the first tab. If I add a jQuery code to the tabpanel it will work fine in the second and third tab. If anyone has an idea of how I can get IE7/IE8 to stop the error it would be much appreciated. Below is the code for the tabpanel. Tab 1 Tab 2 Tab 3 Tab 4 Tab 1 Tab 2 Tab 3 Tab 4 The code for the tabpanel is here: $(document).ready(function() { $('ul.tabs').zIndex(999);

What's New In Adobe Photoshop Free Download For Windows 10 2015?

Love between normal, not queer people has been butchered, and that's why queer people have to take the lead in making marriage between people of the same sex legal The Supreme Court verdict on a batch of petitions on same-sex marriage has not changed the country's ailing society. If anything, it has made the old social evils worse. As our Human Dignity Report on sexual exploitation points out, marriage has been the most toxic vehicle of women's exploitation for generations. Yet the judgement on two of the petitions — that challenged Section 14 of the Delhi High Court order and the provision of Section 377 of the Indian Penal Code — makes it legal for the state to grant licenses of marriage to same-sex couples. Marriage is a contract, not a lifestyle choice that the state should validate or oppose. The era of queer bashing in India is over. It can be a lesbian, bisexual or transgender woman or a gay or lesbian man. Gender remains a social construct. Gay people are just a variant of "normal" people. Hence, it's time for us to rise up and take the lead in re-formulating the concept of marriage in India as a legally sanctioned, consensual, civil contract entered into for mutual support and protection. This will not be easy. The Supreme Court's judgement has been made on a political, not a legal, footing. However, even if the same law is enacted for all states, it can't leave a single person behind. "Marriage should exist as a private matter. But sadly, it's been butchered. It's become a privileged undertaking for straight people only. So much so that it's time for the queer community to take the lead in re-framing the concept of marriage in India," said Delhi-based academic, Shree Paradkar. Marriage has lost all meaning Section 377, known as the "anti-gay law", says any sexual activity between an adult and a person under the age of 21 is illegal and anyone found guilty can be imprisoned for life. "It criminalises a relationship between consenting adults and prevents them from entering the law-defined institution of marriage in a country where marriages are regulated by the state," explained Sunayana Krishnan, founder of anti-shackling Human Rights Law
