Features can be triggered by actions such as players ball possession or distance travelled by using artificial intelligence, and assist the player in performing actions with the ball. For example, the “kick” action can be modified to perform a low shot or a chip shot by changing the amount of spin on the ball using the player’s actual movement. The “slide tackle” action can change into a “throw-in” action by changing the player’s pitch and target, enabling “unlimited” throw-ins for the attacking team. Player Passes: Players can change the ball by passing to a teammate. Players will change the ball into a pass during high-tempo games when they are not touching the ball, by passing it to the side and then to the other side of the field. The pass is selected from specific passes that are appropriate for the situation: a simple pass for a dribbler, a high pass for a player with space in the middle, and a cross pass for a team with a large number of playmakers in the middle. Using the new “Passing Style” feature, players can also choose from two different passing styles – classic passing and elaborate passing. The elaborate passing feature gives players more options and allows them to pass and change direction with far more ease. Player Recovers: Players will change the ball back into a pass by turning around and dribbling after crossing the goal line. Player Interceptions: Players can change the ball back into a pass, quickly catching out a ball thief by intercepting a ball thief who has stolen the ball in a tackle. Player Influences: Players will change the ball back into a pass or pass it towards the sideline while performing defensive actions. Player Dribbling: Players can change the ball into a shot by changing the pitch angle, using Player Changes on the ball and performing high and low shots. Goalkeeper Shooting: Goalkeepers can change the ball into a cross pass when shooting from a long distance. Goalkeeper Tackles: Goalkeepers will change the ball back into a pass or pass it into open space by performing long passes from shot angles. Goalkeeper Interceptions: Goalkeepers can change the ball into a cross pass by changing the pitch angle or by using Player Changes on the ball. Goalkeeper Snap Shots: Goalkeepers will be able to change the ball into a

Using the computer vision technology of the HawkEye Engine, each player on the pitch can then be tracked in 4K and make every pass, dribble, tackle or run as fluid as the player who is wearing the number 10 jersey. The depth of the technology and detail of the animations makes every player seem like they are doing exactly what they do on the pitch, every time.
