Report: Microsoft eyeing acquisition of advertising network RocketFish Named a one of the “Billion Dollar Startups” by Business 2 Community and Small Business Trends, Microsoft acquisition of RocketFish is said to be on the cards. According to a report by FastCompany, RocketFish’s customers include some of the top-revenue online-advertising agencies including DoubleClick and Rubicon Project. The company, whose software helps advertisers measure, optimize, and attribute internet analytics on their websites, already has a partnership with Microsoft Advertising, which helped RocketFish improve its technology to make it easy for marketers to integrate it into marketing channels such as Google AdWords, Bing, Facebook, and Twitter. RocketFish is said to be valued at more than $1 billion but is reportedly looking for a purchase price in the $500 million range. “RocketFish has built a great team with tremendous execution, but their biggest risk is buying a business that is not what they think it is,” said Robert Kyncl, director of cross-device marketing at Facebook, in response to the FastCompany report.

Microsoft's acquisition of RocketFish would bring Microsoft Online Services and Bing Marketing's relationship with RocketFish to a whole new level. With Microsoft taking over RocketFish, the focus of RocketFish would shift from the development and operation of RocketFish's platforms and services to the production and support of Microsoft Online Services and Bing Marketing offerings.

"RocketFish is really looking to provide a next-gen analytics platform that is geared toward a big part of our business where we see a lot of growth in online advertising. There is a lot of demand in the marketplace," said RocketFish COO and co-founder Dan Jurafsky, to FastCompany. "It is a very potent part of our product offering."

"Bing is seeing a lot of early wins here," said Jurafsky, adding that RocketFish's analytics capabilities is key to that. While RocketFish users include companies that work with Microsoft, RocketFish does not have a Microsoft relationship and RocketFish's technology has not yet been integrated into the Microsoft Advertising platform, according to the FastCompany report. The acquisition is said to be at the top of Microsoft's list of potential acquisitions following its most recent $2.2 billion buy of LinkedIn and could include an acquisition of certain Rocket Thermoplastic elastomers such as polyurethanes are commonly used in the production of technical articles where properties are required which are not obtained from other materials. Properties such as elasticity, abrasion resistance and flexibility can be imparted to a substrate by utilizing, for example, the urethane structure.

Thermoplastic elastomers are also useful as coatings for substrates and for repairing a substrate. In one method of producing polyurethane, a polyol is first formed by reaction of a lower aliphatic polyol with an organic polyisocyanate in the presence of a catalytic amount of an alkaline material. The polyol is then reacted with a polyacid to produce the polyurethane which has thermoplastic properties and elastomer properties. While a large number of polyols can be used, it is generally considered to be advantageous in preparing polyurethane to employ polyols having a low equivalent weight and a high concentration of hydroxyl groups. Thus, polyester polyols having a low equivalent weight and a high hydroxyl content are used in preparing polyurethanes. However, it is difficult to prepare polyurethane dispersions from these polyester polyols. Other polyols can be used which are relatively easily prepared, which do not require a high equivalent weight and can be formed to have a relatively low concentration of hydroxyl groups. For example, the polyol may be an allene oxide adduct of glycerol with 1,2-propylene glycol or neopentyl glycol. In utilizing an allene oxide adduct of glycerol with 1,2-propylene glycol, the adduct should contain from about 3 to about 7 allene oxide groups and the 1,2-propylene glycol should contain from about 80 to about 95 mol percent propylene oxide units. One commercially available allene oxide adduct of glycerol with 1,2-propylene glycol is made by reacting one part of glycerol with 1.5 to 2 parts of 1,2-propylene glycol and 3 parts of propylene oxide at 170.degree. F. for 3.5 hours in the presence of a basic catalyst such as sodium hydroxide. This product has a hydroxyl number of about 120 and contains from about 70 to about 98 mol percent 1,2-propylene oxide units. The allene oxide adducts of glycerol
