FIFA 22 brings to life an alternative, Real Player Motion Capture representation of the 4v4 game mode and will be available in the coming months. In addition, the enhanced gameplay controls feature an overhauled ball handling model and revised kicking mechanics, implemented to let players have more freedom in decision making, seeing an improvement in each area of the game. The updated dribbling mechanics also see new moves and tricks, while players are encouraged to complete aerial duels and take advantage of through-ball possibilities. New approach to passing An entirely new passing model will be introduced in FIFA 22, the first iteration of which is now available to play in the upcoming beta. This new 'Line of Sight' passing model opens up a whole new range of passing possibilities, with players able to deflect the ball with their hands or shoulder, while vision line passing also adds more passing options in the final stages of a move. Front Pivot Kicks FIFA 22 brings many improvements to the front pivot kicks, with players being able to kick the ball from a higher position, a harder trajectory and whilst off balance. More accuracy is added to the Knee Kicks, whilst the Triple Kicks are made easier to perform, especially on crosses and with ball's being moved faster across the pitch. Triple Kicks Triple Kicks are a great opportunity for on-the-ball forwards, utility players and defensive midfielders to use their speed on a give-and-go, where the ball is played to one side, then sent back to the opposite side as quickly as possible. Players can earn "Triple Kicks" by performing a successful dribble between touches, creating space and using the momentum that was built up during the dribble to cut inside or shoot. Vision Line Kicks This is a great skill for attacking players to use to isolate their defender and start an offensive move. Triple Pivot Kicks Triple Pivot Kicks are the ultimate in versatility as they are played in all four outfield positions, making them great for isolating defenders, creating space, drawing fouls and driving up the pitch. More Levels of Crossing At the top level of the game, players need to master the "Assist" ability by crossing the ball from the wings towards the centre of the pitch. In order to manage that, players need the support of many players, which
