Percutaneous Coronary Intervention in Patients With Non-ST Elevation Myocardial Infarction and Prior Coronary Artery Bypass Graft Surgery. The aim of the study was to assess risk factors for ischemic complications in patients with non-ST elevation acute coronary syndrome (NSTE-ACS) after prior coronary artery bypass graft (CABG) surgery. We compared the results in 130 consecutive patients with NSTE-ACS who underwent elective PCI after prior CABG surgery with a control group of 130 consecutive NSTE-ACS patients, without prior CABG surgery, who underwent PCI between 2002 and 2013. We assessed differences in clinical and angiographic characteristics between the 2 groups. The rate of myocardial infarction was 9% in the PCI group and 1.5% in the control group (odds ratio, 8.3; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.9-36.7; P=0.002). In-hospital mortality was similar in the 2 groups (odds ratio, 1.4; 95% CI, 0.3-6.1; P=0.6). Patients in the PCI group were significantly older (P

Q: How can I make an ASP.NET WebAPI work with an Ajax-only web app? We have a JQuery-based web application that uses mostly AJAX calls to call ASP.NET WebAPI methods. The problem is that we now need to make an architectural change. The AJAX calls all go via the same well-known URL but to an XML response to get data from the WebAPI. My plan was to make an API Controller in the WebAPI just to grab the data we need, and then build a WCF AJAX service to use the data. I have built the WCF service and even do the RESTful Web API calls correctly using ajax in the web client, but I cannot get this to work when I make a call through Fiddler2 to test it. I get a 502 status code with the message "Cannot process the current request due to a downstream redirection." If I make the same call to any other ASP.NET web page, it works perfectly. I have been stuck on this and cannot see a solution. A: This is a known issue with ASP.NET MVC 4 and MVC 5, which I believe has since been fixed, but you should still take a look at this article to get a fix for it: Using Fiddler isn't going to help because fiddler's functionality is to intercept traffic before it's sent across the wire. If possible, simply use another service that can do what you're trying to do; RESTful API has built-in authentication methods that will allow other people to use your API. #!/usr/bin/env python import sys import urllib2 last_month = int(sys.argv[1])
