Human telomerase (hTR) is involved in cellular immortalization through telomerase elongation of the telomere. Recently, the RNA of hTR was shown to be a critical component in the telomerase-telomere interaction. Therefore, targeting hTR recognition is essential for the development of novel anti-cancer agents. Currently, most studies focus on preparing DNA-based recognition elements, but in this study we prepared RNA-decorated gold nanorods (AuNRs) in order to recognize the human telomerase RNA (hTR) directly. AuNRs have a structural size from 30 to 60 nm and could be functionalized with specific RNA aptamers via the electrostatic interaction between the surface-functionalized RNA and the surface-bound gold nanorods. To identify the structures of the hairpin RNA aptamers, we performed circular dichroism (CD) and gel shift assays. Our results showed that the optimal stem
