New FEATURE: Complete Player Ratings Introducing a new feature in FIFA 22 called Complete Player Ratings, this feature provides a 3D visual representation of the player for quick and easy viewing. The Complete Player Ratings are generated automatically using the high-fidelity motion capture data from player data-driven gameplay and are visible on the home page of the Touch and Reveal Players and Teams. New FEATURE: Free Kicks The Free Kicks system allows the goalkeeper to take control of a timed kick-off. The goalkeeper can make the most of the clearances, block the ball in play and take shots on goal using all of the new ball physics systems. New FEATURE: Ball Physics System New physics-based ball mechanics have been introduced to FIFA 22. The ability to accurately model a variety of movements, including balls that are forced into the air while coming off a player's boot, has been added. The new ball physics have enabled realistic ball movement and an improved ball control system. New FEATURE: Quick Pass A new pass command has been added to the quick navigation menu that is only active when on the ground. If the player holds down the 'Pass' button while pressing 'Run' and the button rebounds, the player will 'Quick Pass' on to an open teammate. Improved User Interface New graphic presentation and presentation options have been added to the game for increased precision and clarity. The new presentation features include: 1. New graphics to the Home League and Away League pages. 2. Option to remove all the information on the Home and Away teams from the Home League and Home Cup menus. 3. Lower graphics resolution for the Home and Away Teams on Matchday. 4. New switch for the Pass button behavior. New 3D Templates New 3D, customizable, professionally-designed player templates have been added to the player graphics. These templates give the player a unique visual appearance. New Items and Improvements The goalkeeping system has been improved to allow for greater goalkeeping performance. New Team Graphics The colors of most teams have been updated, with two new team colors for Arsenal FC and Villarreal CF. The 2018/19 kits for both Real Madrid CF and Manchester United FC have been updated. Updated Team Anthem Music New audio for the Home Team Anthem, Away Team Anthem and

FIFA – FIFA stands for "Football" FIFA is a series of sports simulations developed by EA Canada. The "FIFA" in the name does not refer to the word football. It is a contraction of the names "Foot-Ball Association Internationale" and stands for "Foot-Ball Association International Federation." The word football is slang and pronounced "football". All FIFA games have a goal of taking the mechanics from the real game of football and applying them to a videogame. What do I mean by that? The primary mechanic players will recognize from the game will be the accurate ball physics that make it feel as though the ball is behaving naturally instead of being artificially made to behave how the designer wants it to. Why do we use the word "football" instead of "soccer"? The word "soccer" was coined by association football (AF for short) rules and is the term used when the rules and regulations of one sport are applied to another sport (ie. American Football when referring to Canadian football, etc.). The term soccer was coined by association football rules and is used in all of those countries outside of the UK that follow the English rules or codes of football. Why do we call it "Soccer?" FIFA shares a lot of the same rules as the real world and has a set number of players and a set number of balls. The rules of soccer are the basis on which FIFA is developed. The addition of additional codes that are unique to each different sport means FIFA does not conform to soccer rules 100%. You need to make judgments as to if the ball is over the line or not. This is where the "football" in the name comes into play. FIFA gives the players who play on the real world a ball that behaves like a ball would in real life. What is new about FIFA? We also see innovation in the matchday experience. The matchday experience is growing all the time. With the addition of the "The Journey" section in FIFA 21, we can now capture the rhythm of a match and put it into the hands of our players. This takes into account their experience and time spent playing the game as well as their weekly match performance. Now, when you are playing in a match in FIFA, it feels like a realistic moment and not a timer. We have other innovative matchday features. One example is with a revamped "dribble" or touch move. This system will
