Saints Row: The Third is the newest installment in the Saints Row series and was developed by Volition and published by Deep Silver Volition is a video game developer and publisher.Q: What is wrong with this proof of a functional equation? Prove that $y(x) = xy'(x) + y(x)^2$ has a solution $y(x)$ in $(0, \infty)$. My proof: Let $y(x) = 1 - e^{-x}$. Then $y'(x) = e^{-x}$, which is positive. So, at $x = 1$ the function has the value 1 , and by the IVT there is a value in $(0, 1)$ that is a solution. Similarly for $x \in (1, \infty)$ there is a value that is a solution by the similar argument. We can see that y is increasing on $(0, 1)$, and decreasing on $(1, \infty)$, so y is bounded in both cases, so a limit exists. Now, we need to show that it is the unique solution. This is the second part of the proof: Let $y_1(x)$ and $y_2(x)$ be solutions in $(0, \infty)$. By the functional equation, we have $x - y_1(x)^2 = x - y_2(x)^2$. Now, $y_1(x)$ is decreasing on $(0, 1)$, since it is positive, so it is bounded on the first interval. Also $y_2(x)$ is decreasing on $(1, \infty)$ since it is bounded below by 0 , so it is bounded on the second interval as well. Hence, both have limits, which means they have the same limit, which by the IVT means they are equal. But I am unsure that y_1 and y_2 are the solutions, since they are both bounded on $(0, \infty)$, but are obviously
