Description of the Related Art Most of currently commercially-available digital cameras (image-pickup apparatuses) use a common method of generating image data by capturing the subject using a CCD (Charge Coupled Device) and encoding the generated image data using a JPEG (Joint Photographic Experts Group) compression system. However, the JPEG system has a problem of being poor in encoding efficiency due to its two-dimensional intra-image encoding. To improve the compression efficiency, digital cameras that adopt a three-dimensional intra-image encoding method have recently been proposed. As an example of such digital cameras, there are a digital camera which achieves multi-frame encoding on the basis of a difference between frames and a digital camera which achieves multi-frame encoding on the basis of a difference among spatial frequency regions. In addition, some of such digital cameras, such as those disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2005-006671 and Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2004-39063, perform multi-frame encoding to achieve encoding of an image using a difference between adjacent frames. For example, Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2005-006671 discloses a technology for removing pseudo-contours caused by noise, while Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2004-
