Architectural CAD Software All architectural CAD programs have the potential to be used for general drafting, but it's worth noting the capability of each particular program. The primary function of architectural CAD software, such as AutoCAD and Pro-E, is to create detailed architectural design documentation. This is sometimes referred to as the "traditional" work of architects. Q: What's the difference between "wissen wie" and "wissen, wie"? I am trying to use "wissen wie" to compare this and that, but the meaning is not clear to me. Why do we not use "wissen wie" instead of "wissen, wie" in these examples? A: "Wissen wie" was once quite an important adverb. It's part of a kind of complex predicate "Bildungs-Adjektiv", see here. Bildungs-adjektiv Bildungs-adjektivs sind Adjektive, deren grammatische Funktion eine Veränderung der Art des Objektes beinhaltet, während sie nicht diejenigen Inhalte des Objekts ausmachen, die dadurch verändert werden. Diese Art von Veränderung ist bekannt als »Bildung« und erklärt durch den »Wissenschaftler«. The above is a quote from the (German) Duden here: Wissenschaftler 1. aus dem [Anglizismus] Vergangenheit / Veränderung (Bildung) / Punkt, an dem ich meine höchstes Leistungsvermögen erreiche. 2. die Person, die bestimmte Theorien und Methoden entwickelt. So the advantage of the attributive phrase is that it represents not only the attribute itself, as if it was a noun, but the process of getting the attribute which can be more sophisticated. Compare that with "Wissen, wie" which you use as a pronoun and which just represents the object "wissen". So "wissen wie" means that you don't know what to do about this problem (here the object "wissen wie" can be understood as referring to the problem itself). We did not know how to solve the problem of how to solve the problem Q:  $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \frac{1}{n+2n^2}$

but I feel, I'm always wanting, you know like the dirt on my feet. (SOUNDBITE OF MUSIC) KALB: It is not always easy to cover such weighty topics in a family newspaper, but this column makes me feel as if I'm being invited to share my experiences and struggles of life with the people that I love. PERELMAN: Author Alicia Thomas told me she hadn't been fully engaged in the racial comments that have been shared with her in her community. But I think with enough distance, it's possible to ask what is going on, she says. THOMAS: I'm just not as affected by it. And I haven't really talked with any of my family members. I mean, the next time that I do talk with them, I have just a lack of knowledge of what is going on in my own community. (SOUNDBITE OF MUSIC) KALB: Thomas is a member of Colleague of Our Lady of the Lake Episcopal Church in New Orleans, where she is also a writer. It's an institution that has been in her family for many years. The name of the building on Jackson Square has been changed, but its majestic spires still tell visitors about the Catholic church that can trace its history back to the United States' colonial beginnings. (SOUNDBITE OF MUSIC) KALB: As with many things in the city, especially in the bayou, change seems to be a slow process. And Mayor Mitch Landrieu of New Orleans says that is how he feels about the way many, including the residents of his city, are coping with the storms. MITCH LANDRIEU: The people of New Orleans had a tough year. The administration had a tough year. I'll go ahead and say it, our public school system had a tough year. So it's going to take time, but we'll get there. KALB: The mayor says he has to focus on the rebuilding of the city, not look backwards at the problems that occurred in Katrina's wake.
