the money. I agree with the messianic alignment, but thought that the analogy was the best way to explain it: "With God, I want you to remember that He is not begging for my forgiveness. He is the one who washed away my sin when I died. He is the one who brought me to life again. He is the one whose power is greater than His sacrifice. And He is not forcing me to come back to Him as a means of generating a payoff for His generosity, but because He is a kind, gracious, and loving God. When I came to Christ, I was a completely different person. That is why He is able to stand up against the lie that says that in order to be cleansed, I had to do something to earn God's forgiveness and cleansing. But that's the same lie He is fighting against. God has always forgiven me, even though it wasn't my intention. So He has always been able to stand up against the lie that my sin was a burden to Him, that He is forced to forgive me. It is also important to note that I came to Christ alone. After I had been a very active member of a Messianic Jewish congregation, I gave all my resources, my time, my family, even my money to Christ. I repented. I received His gift, and I am now rejoicing in Him and rejoicing with the people
