Your customers' habits are evolving faster than your business. They're using different channels and platforms than they did before. They're bombarded with too much information for any one person to handle. If you're not addressing their expectations, your business will be left behind. There's no way you can keep up with your customers in the way they're moving. The new reality is that you need to be everywhere your customers are — every major social channel, mobile apps and messaging platforms, smart TVs, gaming consoles, and connected devices — in order to succeed. The reasons you need a social media management solution: Sales: Social media marketing helps you connect with customers who've expressed interest in your product or service. You can follow up with them and turn them into sales. Marketing: When you're messaging the right people in the right place, you can drive more organic reach and build brand awareness. Lead generation: If you have a closed social media group, you can reach out to prospects and send them an invitation to join it. You'll have a better understanding of who the people are who interact with you and have engaged with you on social media. Customer service: You can improve your customer service by providing better answers to customer questions and requests. And don't forget about search engines and Google Ads. Managing all these channels and platforms takes time and resources. A social media management solution helps you streamline your workflow, and your team can focus on getting results instead of jumping through a series of hoops. When it comes to social media management, everyone has their favorite features and functionality. But since everyone has unique needs, you need to make sure that it fits your business's goals and your business's needs. That's why our social media management platform goes above and beyond

Cardiac tamponade is a life-threatening complication of pericardial effusion or cardiac surgery. We report the management of 7 cases of cardiac tamponade. The patients were 4 men and 3 women ranging in age from 45 to 76. The etiology of pericardial effusion included malignancy (2 cases), tuberculosis (1 case), post-traumatic hemorrhage into the pericardium (1 case), and cardiac surgery (3 cases). In 2 cases, hemorrhage was the sole cause. Four patients presented as primary pericardial tamponade. Three cases were diagnosed as secondary tamponade caused by postoperative massive pericardial hemorrhage. Pericardiocentesis was performed in 6 cases and a pericardial window in 1 case. The invention relates to a method for producing a coating with low polymer content on a substrate, and also to a coating with low polymer content on a substrate. Metal articles, for example metal strips or metal sheets, are coated by powder-metallurgy processes, for example cold or hot pressing or hot isostatic pressing, in order to protect the metal sheet or metal strip from corrosion. Typically, the coating comprises phosphates or pyrophosphates. The protective coating is applied and then baked in order to produce a coating with low polymer content which is essentially composed of metal oxide in the form of very fine crystals. The disadvantage of such a protective coating is that moisture can penetrate through the coating, which is reflected in a high corrosion rate of the metal strip which is coated. However, vapor-deposited layers with low polymer content such as for example  $\alpha$ -Al<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> are increasingly being used for corrosion protection of metal sheets or metal strips in order to protect the metal sheet or metal strip against corrosion, in particular in the automotive industry, because they are capable of protecting the metal sheet or metal strip to a greater extent from corrosion than conventional protective coatings. The method for producing a vapor-deposited coating of low polymer content on a substrate comprises the following steps: coating of a substrate with a metal oxide layer; reduction of the metal oxide layer to low polymer content; crystallization of the low polymer content to form an Al<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> coating having low polymer content.

Hybrid electric vehicles (HEV) and Plug-in hybrid electric vehicles (PHEV) are known to include an engine coupled with a transmission through a differential. A portion of the engine's output power is used to drive a generator through the transmission. The generator is used to charge an electrical storage device, such as a battery. The battery provides electrical energy for powering an electric motor that is operatively connected to a drive shaft of the transmission to provide mechanical energy to propel the vehicle. In some hybrid vehicles, the transmission may be operated in fixed gear mode or in a "splitter" mode, where the transmission is continuously either in neutral or in a forward gear. The motor may also be operated at a fixed speed at full torque in response to a driver demand torque that may be applied to the accelerator pedal of the vehicle. In such hybrid vehicles, the motor may not be driven to rotate at the same speed as the engine so as to accommodate differences in rotational speeds between the engine and the motor, resulting in torque disturbances that may be more noticeable when operating the vehicle in the fixed gear mode or splitter mode.

's mind of the contents of the letter, and the circumstances under which the statement was made. As stated in 58 Am.Jur., § 974, Witnesses, pp. 948-949: " * * * Whether or not it has been clearly established by a witness that his testimony is true is to be determined by the court or jury; it cannot be established by an exhibit introduced as a record. * * * " Obviously, the affidavit accompanying the motion for new trial does not show affirmatively that defendant did not receive the letter. He was, however, entitled to testify regarding the contents of the letter and the circumstances surrounding its delivery, etc., and thus, would have been permitted to testify that he did not receive the letter.
