Create Powerpoint presentations in a hurry Like Photoshop, Microsoft's PowerPoint (ppt) software offers the ability to add and manipulate images in a layered system. However, PowerPoint is a 'free' program without the need for a paid subscription. The program runs on Windows, Windows Mobile and Symbian phones, and offers the user a wide range of features and options, as well as the ability to create presentations that you can deliver over the Internet or on CDs for classroom or business use. PowerPoint comes in two versions, one for home use and one for business use. You can, however, create a slide show and deliver it as a DVD movie, or as a web page for streaming presentation. The software contains a large library of ready-to-use templates, including transparencies, special effects, and photo-and-movie galleries. Figure 1-6 illustrates the early steps in preparing an image to be added to a presentation as a slide. In the figure, the applier has added a document image to a PowerPoint presentation. The applier can manipulate the image by using the various tools found in the program's Clipboard palette. You can use the Color Adjustment workspace to view and edit colors, or modify the image by using the Hand tool. You can also add or subtract pixels from the image with the Eraser tool. You can use the Zoom tool to make an image smaller or larger, and use the Pan tool to move it. You can also use the various tools found in the shape and vector workspace to add or subtract lines, fill in or erase existing elements, and change the image's perspective. PowerPoint is a great tool to create an effective presentation or to give your clients a sneak preview of your latest work. You can also create templates for different types of clients.
