It is a good place to meet new people!Q: Qt Model View Not Updating I have two views in a Qt application. The first view retrieves data from a database and displays it. I also have a second view that I have created which allows for additional editing of that data. I would like the second view to update the table in the first, at least to the extent that the current values are going to be persisted when I exit the application. I have the following model being created and displayed in the first view: Item* ItemModel::createNewItem() { QSqlDatabase db = QSqlDatabase::addDatabase("QSQLITE"); db.setDatabaseName("base.db"); db.open(); QSqlQuery qry("select * from items limit 1"); Item* newItem = new Item(qry); qry.setForwardOnly(true); return newItem; } I want the second view to be able to go to this same database and replace the values based on the values that are being displayed in the first view. I have the following: void DisplayOneView::slotUpdateAllItems(const QModelIndex &arg1) { QSqlDatabase db = QSqlDatabase::addDatabase("QSQLITE"); db.setDatabaseName("base.db"); db.open(); QSqlQuery query; query.prepare("select * from items order by id"); while (query.next()) // Save the result in the items table displayView->replaceItem(query.value(0), query.value(1), query.value(2),
