JPEG versus PSD There are so many different file formats available that it is easy to get confused.

Here's the deal: • If you're saving your files as a JPEG you can load them as JPEGs in other applications, like PowerPoint or e-mail. This is ideal for sending images to someone in a particular format, like a camera. It has a fair amount of efficiency, but lacks the flexibility of a TIFF file. • If you are saving your files as a PSD you need to think about the purpose of the file. For image manipulation, you will have a much greater range of options than with a JPEG file. A PSD file is the ideal format to manipulate and share and it is the format used in programs like Photoshop. In this book we will be working with both PSD and JPEG files. In some chapters, we'll be looking at editing a PSD file, but this is, in most cases, just a means of supporting the exercise. Doing a little research before purchasing Photoshop software will help you make the right choice. You can quickly find a tutorial on YouTube, as well as a number of books. You will learn the basics in Chapter 2 and you will learn more in Chapters 3 and. ## Using the Editor Panel Photoshop's interface is a tall rectangular form of the letter "O." It's the same interface you've seen in Figure 1-1, located on the left side of your screen. Figure 1-1: The Photoshop editor panel.

Some of the most used features on Photoshop Monochromatic editing This allows us to edit any images in mono-color. Using this feature we can easily edit the color of our images, and in more advanced ways apply different monochromatic transformations like hue, saturation, or brightness.

Blending modes These edit blend modes that are similar to blend modes for photographs. Some of the most used ones are: Soft Light (Normal blend): Lighten or darken only pixels that are similar to the pixels we want to keep, and darken pixels that are similar to the pixels we want to eliminate.

Hard Light (Vivid Light): Lighten only pixels that are similar to the pixels we want to keep, and darken pixels that are similar to the pixels we want to eliminate. Hue (HSL): This feature allows us to adjust the hue of a specific color, adjusting from red to green. This is useful to make our colors more saturated or less saturated. The hue is a way to describe color tones. Invert: This function allows us to invert the colors of a pixel. Screen mode: This allows us to see the colors behind the image. This is really helpful for getting accurate colors in images. Highlights: This features allows us to make an image more visible. It makes the brighter colors more visible. Opacity: This allows us to adjust the opacity of an image from 0% to 100%. This way we can quickly reduce or increase the opacity of an image. Curves: This is the most sophisticated and powerful manipulation tool for photos and videos. This tool allows us to fine-tune the picture. It's similar to the curves of photographs, but more powerful. We can adjust the curve to modify the brightness of the image. Spacing (px): This feature allows us to align the elements in the picture. This way we are not only putting everything in the same position of the picture, but also we can adjust them. Elements panel This feature is a good alternative to the Layers panel of Photoshop. Its advantage is that everything is organized in a more friendly and user-friendly way. Mask: This is a selection that allows us to edit only the pixels we want. It also allows us to apply different adjustments and effects to selected pixels. Cropping: This feature allows us to select only the areas

Basketball Legend Earvin "Magic" Johnson Dead At 59 Basketball legend Earvin "Magic" Johnson is dead at age 59, according to multiple media outlets citing the Los Angeles Times. CBS Los Angeles confirmed the news with a statement, saying "Laker legend and NBA Hall of Famer Earvin 'Magic' Johnson passed away in Los Angeles early this morning," adding, "While the news is still very fresh for his family, friends, and teammates, his outstanding legacy as one of the greatest players of all time will endure." Fans and athletes including LeBron James, Kobe Bryant and Chris Paul tweeted their condolences. Cardinals Nation will have more on this breaking news as we get it. off to a great start." There were also technological advancements available to those who were interested. Like radio, television, and cell phones, this new technology allowed for the development of interactive devices used to access software and websites. Toys and games were also two of the most successful types of software produced during this time. Unfortunately, there was still very little in the way of home shopping software or virtual items at this time. The only retail stores were either independent businesses or larger department stores like Woolworths. Considering that most people bought their groceries from the stores rather than making their own shopping trips, the only people who had the opportunity to purchase these items were those with the resources to visit the department stores. Software developers had the potential to give their users an electronic version of the "online shopping mall" that was common in the 1990s. These mall-like websites could be used to download music, movies, and software, and also provide virtual presents. An example of this type of software was the shopping website Game Empire. In the late 1990s and early 2000s, people often spent more time on-line than interacting with their friends and family, hence there was an increased interest in on-line chat rooms. People were invited to share their thoughts and experiences through these chat rooms. While the websites or software were free to use, the owners of the websites received royalties from companies that featured their software, and it was not unusual for a user to spend hundreds of dollars on one of the online chat rooms. In the case of BBS-based chat rooms, many of them could not be accessed by many people because they required special equipment to use them. In 2001, the United States was a BBS-heavy nation. In

Q: Cannot edit Gridview-insert new line in TextBox with Gridview's TextChanged event I have this GridView and I want to insert new line in textbox when I click on Add button but my problem is I cannot make that.I added click event to TextBox control it did not work too. Here is my code.

A: You can do this a different way: Add rows dynamically to a gridview with the textbox in a grid cell (cell template) While debugging this, I made GridView1's NewRow event trigger when the data in the database is null: protected void GridView1_NewRow(object sender, GridViewNewRowEventArgs e) { int i = e.RowIndex; if (i >= 0 && e.Row.RowType != DataControlRowType.Header) { TextBox txtbox = new TextBox();
