A: That is the default behavior of display:inline. If you wish to avoid that, you could specify display:inline-block. I cannot explain why all the inline values are affected, maybe there is a bug in the browser. You could also remove the line-break to avoid it. A: Some browsers group inline elements together and line-break them for rendering purposes. to avoid that Remove tags inside it's child elements. A: The "1" display means that there's no line break (it's a block level element). I'd suggest either using inline-block for an element that you don't want to break the text up like this or putting it in a div that is not inline and does not break the text up. Q: Can I pick my own clothes? I'm not sure that I've managed to find the clothes to wear, let alone whether I have enough food for the quest to run. Is there any way to simply walk around the city and look at the clothing available? Does looking around pick up an item that I can get, or do I have to be in a certain type of clothing to get a particular item? I only currently have the blue pants and blue shirt, and don't seem to be able to get any new items. Is there a way to change what I'm wearing? If so, how do I do it? A: In the base game you can only find the outfits shown in the pictures available in the gallery. You can only change your outfit to the tailor provided by the inn. In Saints Row IV you can find clothes not found in the base game if you look in the right spots: For example, in the Union Jack Pub - the guy behind the bar will offer you clothes for a price. You can also find clothes on dead people. The things you find in the Saints Row IV TV DLC contain outfits from the base game.
